

Before
Destiny
Thomas
Led Women,
God Was Teaching Her to Listen

JULY 2026 | WRITTEN BY KAYLA EVERETT

Before Destiny Thomas Led Women, God Was Teaching Her to Listen

written by Kayla Everett published by Paging Kayla Camille LLC

July 15, 2026

There comes a moment in many people's lives when faith demands more than belief. It requires obedience.

The Prayerpist®, Destiny Thomas, experienced that moment when God asked her to walk away from the security of corporate America and trust Him with a future she could not yet see. While carrying significant debt and navigating one of the most difficult seasons of her life, the decision to leave corporate America made little sense on paper. But in the middle of uncertainty, Destiny discovered something that would ultimately reshape not only her own life, but also the lives of countless women.

Today, known through her ministry as Realizing Destiny® and The Prayerpist®, Destiny equips women to confidently hear the voice of God for themselves, embrace their God-given identity, and walk boldly in the purpose He has prepared for them. Through prayer, coaching, leadership development, retreats, and mentorship, she has built a ministry centered on one conviction: the clearer we hear God's voice, the more confidently we can follow His direction.

When Pain Becomes Preparation

Destiny's ministry was never born from comfort. Before encouraging others through seasons of uncertainty, she was living through one herself.

After battling infertility, journaling became more than a place to record her thoughts; instead, it became a place where she learned to process disappointment, seek God earnestly, and recognize His voice in the middle of unanswered prayers.

What began as private conversations with God eventually became the foundation for public ministry. Instead of allowing her pain to define her, Destiny came to believe God was using it to prepare her.

"Sometimes the thing that you're attacked at—and in—the most is where your power lies," Destiny reflected.

She later began writing about her infertility journey and praying publicly for others, discovering that some of the greatest breakthroughs often begin in the places where people have experienced their deepest wounds.

Choosing Obedience Over Security

One of the defining moments in Destiny's journey came when God instructed her to leave her corporate insurance career. By every practical measure, it appeared to be the wrong decision.

"I lived my life according to the American dream," Destiny shared. A stable career, financial security, and the traditional markers of success had shaped the direction of her life. But when God called her to something different, she realized His definition of success required a different response.

Looking back, Destiny doesn't describe that season as one of loss. Instead, she remembers the peace that accompanied saying yes to God's direction.

For her, the greater question was never what she might lose. It was what she might gain by trusting Him completely.

That decision became the catalyst for a ministry that now reaches women through one-on-one Prayerpy® sessions, leadership coaching, international retreats, and programs designed to help them confidently discern God's voice.

Hearing God with Confidence

At the heart of Destiny's work is a simple belief that God still speaks.

Yet many believers struggle to distinguish His voice from fear, insecurity, or the opinions of others. Through Realizing Destiny®, she helps women develop confidence in hearing God's direction while strengthening their relationship with Him.

Her goal extends beyond simply mentoring or coaching. She equips women to cultivate their intimacy with God because she believes lasting transformation begins when people learn to discern His voice for themselves.

For Destiny, confidence isn't found in having all the answers. It's found in learning to recognize the One who does.

Leading Without Losing Yourself

Leadership has taught Destiny many lessons, but perhaps none more important than the value of healthy boundaries.

She openly shared that many of those lessons came through betrayal. For years, she found herself extending grace without discernment, holding onto relationships long after God had released them.

The fear of rejection, particularly from other women, often caused her to overextend herself.

Over time, however, she realized that healthy boundaries are not barriers to love. They are expressions of wisdom. Today, Destiny leads with greater empathy while also recognizing that protecting the assignments God has entrusted to her sometimes requires difficult decisions.

Building Whole Leaders

Although Destiny is passionate about helping women discover their calling, she believes success should never come at the expense of becoming whole.

Through her leadership programs, retreats, and mentorship, she emphasizes emotional health, spiritual maturity, and sustainable leadership.

Recently, Destiny returned to corporate work while continuing to lead her ministry and business. Rather than seeing them as competing assignments, she views them as different expressions of the same purpose.

Her journey continues to reinforce a truth she now carries with confidence: God can use every season, every assignment, and every workplace.

Leaving a Legacy

At the heart of Destiny's journey is a question that extends far beyond ministry: what will remain long after the work is finished?

She hopes to be remembered as a woman who gave God everything He entrusted to her without sacrificing what mattered most at home.

More than leaving behind accomplishments, she wants her children to inherit a legacy of faith. She hopes they remember a mother who loved well, led with integrity, and demonstrated what it looks like to trust God, even when the path required sacrifice.

Her encouragement to others is simple: Love deeply. Give wholeheartedly. And never allow the fear of criticism to silence your obedience.

Opinions will always exist, and moments of doubt may come, but neither should ever become louder than the voice of God.

Her story is evidence that hearing God's voice is only the beginning. The real transformation happens when you choose to follow it.

To Follow Destiny's Journey: Instagram | Threads @realizing_destiny | TikTok @realizingdestiny
Facebook Realizing Destiny